Artist Davies lived life and his art to the fullest

To the Editor:

I recently learned that Jeff Davies passed away during the night on Feb. 12. He always lived his life to the fullest.

As an artist, he felt every emotion — good, bad or indifferent. Jeff lived through his emotions, and he showed us through his art. He was also a very vocal man. Many times I didn't agree with him, but he always had a rebuttal that made me think, "Whether right, wrong or indifferent, it didn't really matter. That is the point!"

Jeff was very good at pointing this out; what mattered to him was how you felt.

I will miss him. Jeff has left his imprint, his "point," all over Central New York through his art. His followers know this, and our community has benefitted tremendously. Collectively, we all should be aware of his significant contribution.

Jeff, with great respect, I pray that you will rest in Heaven for eternity. May your contribution to the arts live for ever. As always, "La Te Da."
